

Japan shows an increase in urban population from the year 2000 and during that period most of the agricultural land as well as arable land were cleared for constructing the buildings. But the overall population growth is below than the average when comparing with the other countries. As from the first graph forest area is set as protected even the urban population is increasing. Whereas Germany shows the highest percentage of population growth and lowest urban population percentage.

